The way in which healthcare personnel relate to patients determines to a great extent the ethical environment of a facility. The ethical basis of interactions with the patient is the trusting relationship that exists between the patient and every healthcare employee.

Safeguard Privacy:

- Protecting the privacy of our patients is the responsibility of EVERYBODY AT EHS
- We respect the confidentiality of patient information in all forms, including...
 - Spoken information and conversations

 - You or your spouse, children, and other family members...
 - Your neighbors...
 - Your friends...
 - Celebrities or "VIPs"...
 - ...or any other EHS patient, unless you have a legitimate, job-related reason.
- All electronic access to EHS clinical information systems is monitored for compliance.

	Do not place confidential info in regular trash or unlocked recycling bins. Shred documents when no longer needed.
	Do not leave unsecured patient info in plain sight. Be diligent about restricting patient records from public eyes.
	Do not share your electronic password with anybody. Do not use a password that belongs to somebody else.
	Be careful to log-off a computer workstation before leaving the area.
	Be aware of your surroundings. Use caution before discussing patient info in public areas like elevators, hallways, and waiting rooms.
	Be alert for "red flag" warning signs that confidential info is being misused (for example: medical identity theft, insurance fraud).
PHOT	OGRAPHS: There is also a confidentiality issue when taking photographs. No graphs may be taken without express written consent of all those involved.

It is important to report all privacy complaints and/or electronic security breaches, so that EHS can respond appropriately.
